No. 14 -

DEAF THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK:

Despite his near deafness, inventor Thomas Edison would not use a hearing aid. He maintained that very little of what was said was worth hearing, anyway.

One night he and a friend attended a banquet at which a number of long-winded, boring speeches were made. The following day he read an account of the banquet in the newspaper. Each of the speeches appeared in print.

Edison showed the paper to his friend and said: "You had to listen to those speeches last night. I didn't. And you want me to use a hearing aid?"

The Hoosier - Our November - December issue is in the printing process. Thanks for the many articles from your students. A reminder that the next deadline is January 17 for articles to appear in the January - February issue. This does not give you much time after we return from our Christmas break, so start submitting your articles as soon as possible. Also, start thinking of projects or themes your students can do or write about. Whenever you write an article, be sure to include your title (Coach, Chairperson, etc.) When a student writes we need to know what grade that student is in, so please include this information along with the student's name. Thanks again for all the input for this coming issue. Keep those stories coming! Elen Zook & Carrie Hendrickson - Vocational Department
